

Harford lacrosse players stick up in college competition

Eight senior college lacrosse players from Harford County have been named as captains of their respective teams for the 2010 season. All of the girls are 2006 graduates of Harford County high schools and played for the 2006 Northeast Maryland Select (NEMS) team.

The girls are captains of NCAA

Division I and Division III teams.

They are: Courtney Aburn (John Carroll School), University of Delaware; Kelsey Branch (North Harford High School), St. Mary's College of Maryland; Laura Cavanaugh (North Harford High School), Washington and Lee University; Kim Cudmore (Bel Air High School), Salisbury University; Nicole Ditillo (Fallston High School), Gettysburg College; Delia Pais (John Carroll School), Harvard University; Sarah Willis (C. Milton Wright High School), UMBC; Mary Zulty (John Carroll School), The College of William and Mary.

NEMS Lacrosse was the first Harford countywide girls lacrosse club, founded by the late Jim McHugh. His hard work and dedication in building a solid club, along with the '06 coaches Tad Aburn, Brian Evans and Jeff Ford, helped develop the work ethic and leadership these girls are now being recognized for by their college coaches and peers.
